Poultrymen's Banquet To Climax Interesting Program

Final details have been announced by H. C. Hurlburt and his committee for the six-county Egg Institute to be held at the Memorial building next Tuesday and Wednesday. County agents of the six counties—Carroll, Stark, Columbiana, Mahoning, Trumbull and Portage—have been working on the program from the farm end, and they predict large crowds for the meeting. The first day will be devoted to the interests of producers, but is open to anyone interested, Hurlburt says.

Speakers for the day are R. M. Bethke, nutrition specialist at the Ohio experiment station, Wooster; C. M. Ferguson, poultry specialist from Ohio State university; and R. E. Cray, of the same institution. Topics for discussion include disease, mortality, growing of pullets, outlook for the industry, care of eggs, and newer things in poultry nutrition.

Grocers, Restaurateurs Meet
At 8 p. m. Tuesday a session for grocers and restaurateurs is scheduled, with Ferguson and Cray as speakers. There will be general discussion, demonstrations of candling and grading eggs by machine, and exhibits of eggs and grading equipment.

Hatcherymen will have the morning session Wednesday. The meeting will be of the discussion type, with C. M. Ferguson.

At 1:30 the cooking school is scheduled, conducted by Miss Alma Davis of Ohio State university, and Mr. Ferguson.

The poultrymen's banquet will be held Wednesday evening, beginning at 7 o'clock. Main speaker is S. P. Edwards, long connected with poultry and egg marketing in the east, and recently chosen head of the World's Poultry Congress to be held in Cleveland in 1939. The banquet is to be held in the basement of the Methodist church.

Relief Coal Stand Defined By Solons

Ward councilmen have ruled that families on relief, who are living in furnished rooms, or apartments, cannot receive free coal as do other families on relief.

Several indigent families, it is explained by Mrs. Ruth Berry, relief clerk, requested that coal be sent to the homes where they stay to compensate the rent they owe their landlords.

The city is providing food, clothing, medicine and coal for those on relief but does not pay rent bills, the councilman pointed out.

Probers Will Quiz Ohio Awards Board

Senate Investigators Seeking Light On Activities of So-Called "Political Go-Between"

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, Jan. 28.—The senate's graft hunting committee demanded today to know why the Columbia Refining company received so many state contracts for gasoline on which other refineries submitted equal bids.

It planned to call in the senate highway department board of awards, which decides to whom contracts shall go, to see if it could throw light on activities of a so-called "political go-between" who was in Columbia's employ.

Will Ask Restitution
At the same time the investigating committee awaited action from Glen Horn, state purchasing agent, who was ordered by Gov. Martin L. Davey to demand restitution from the Maher-North Coal company of Cleveland if he found the state was charged too much for coal.

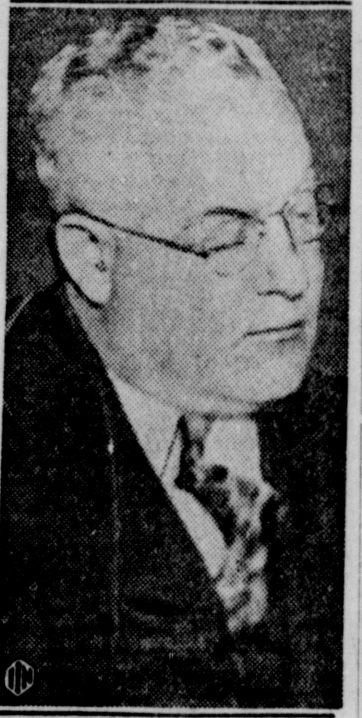

The committee received testimony in Cleveland that the company charged the state $1.60 a ton for 10,500 tons of coal for which the firm paid 92 cents. Furthermore, the committee learned that the coal was strip-mined, an inferior grade fuel, while Horn said he expected to receive deep-mined coal.

The governor told Horn in a letter that if the company was asked to make restitution, and failed to do so, "they must be barred from all state business."

The decision to call in the highway board of awards was reached after James Metzgerbaum, committee counsel, produced state records showing the Columbia Refining company was awarded numerous contracts when its bids were no lower than as many as 17 other bidders. On the board are G. Murray Anderson, assistant highway director; B. H. Frisch, chief maintenance engineer, and Paul V. Goodman, highway purchasing agent.

Got the Business
"Columbia was never the low bidder in any case we have found," Metzgerbaum told the committee. "But Columbia got the business."

He said that G. Lloyd Weil, former Akron mayor, who offered his services to Columbia and then brought the firm state orders for approximately $33,500 gallons of gasoline in 20 months the committee was told.

G. Lloyd Weil

Investigators of an Ohio senate committee conducting a hearing at Columbus drew from C. Lloyd Weil, above, former mayor of Akron, O., the admission that he had received commissions on gasoline sold by a Cleveland refining company through him to the state.

He said that G. Lloyd Weil, former Akron mayor, who offered his services to Columbia and then brought the firm state orders for approximately $33,500 gallons of gasoline in 20 months the committee was told.

BROOKFIELD "5" HERE TONIGHT

Replaces Warren; Daughter of Coach Hill Dies Suddenly

Postponement of the scheduled basketball game between Salem High school's Quakers and Warren Harding High's Presidents was announced today following the death of Judy Hill, seven-year-old daughter of Pierre Hill, Warren coach.

The game was to have been played tonight at Salem High school gymnasium. No future date for the contest has been set, although officials of the athletic departments of the two schools plan to get together in the near future to discuss re-scheduling the teams.

In the event that the two schools can not reach an agreement on a future date, the game will be cancelled. Faculty Manager Frederick E. Cope said.

Brookfield Scheduled

The Presidents will be replaced here tonight by Brookfield's Class A team which has won five games and lost four to date and is rated 26th in the current standings of Ohio scholastic basketball teams.

Cope arranged the game with Brookfield after learning of the death of Hill's daughter early this morning. He attempted to line up several other teams, but encountered schedule conflicts in every case.

Brookfield will bring only its varsity squad to the Salem High court. The Salem reserve team will play a case.

Papers Returned In Engineer Case

LISBON, Jan. 28.—Documents relating to the litigation in the quo warranto proceedings initiated by Lloyd Kirk against Robert Wheatley, county engineer, were returned Thursday afternoon by officials of the supreme court.

The papers were received by Clerk of Courts Carl Stacey. Atty. Lloyd Tobin, one of Mr. Wheatley's counsel, stated the receipt of the documents had no particular significance and did not necessarily mark the end of the hard fought case.

A motion of a rehearing is pending before the state supreme court following the tribunal's action last week in overruling an appeal from the appellate court ousting Wheatley and reinstating Kirk as engineer.

CLERK, JANITORS EXAMS LOOMING

More Than 75 Get Application Papers From Commission

Considerable interest is being shown in the civil service examinations to be held next Wednesday night preparatory to hiring school janitors and a water works clerk.

Roy Harris, clerk of the commission, announced today that at least 75 persons had obtained applications for the exams. These papers must be returned to him by Monday. Law prescribes that the applications must be in the hands of the civil service commission clerk three days before the date of the examination.

The examinations Wednesday will be held in the High school building. Mayor George Harroff is expected to appoint a successor to Charles Davidson, who resigned as water works department clerk, as soon as the grades of applicants are certified to him.

The school janitor exams have been scheduled in order to create an eligibility list, prior to the school board's appointment of janitors to replace three who will retire on pension in the summer. They are Frank Probert, Raymond Shinn and Frank Rollins.

Mahoning Engineer, Only 29, Honored

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 28.—Robert J. Schomer, 29, Mahoning county engineer and the youngest public official ever elected to a county post, last night received the Youngstown Junior Chamber of Commerce community service medal.

The award was made on the basis of his recently completed first year in office, during which he completed the most extensive road building plan in the county's history, paid off $32,000 of his department's debts, increased his equipment value by $50,000 and ended the year with an $88,000 unspent balance.

School Days Over

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 28.—Commencement exercises will have ended the high school careers of 558 Youngstown students here by tonight.

SOFTENER COST WOULD TIE UP WATER REPAIRS

Department Has Debt of $20,000; Could Not Pay
Operating Cost

OFFICIALS URGED TO DELAY PLANS

City Engineer Admits His Estimate of Annual Cost Is Minimum

Salem's waterworks department, from which city officials propose to take thousands of dollars to install a water softener, has a bonded indebtedness of $20,000 which cannot be paid off in less than four years.

Its sinking fund, or surplus accumulated for repairs and extensions, would be entirely wiped out by appropriations sufficient to install the softener.

Its annual income—if all water bills were collected and no money spent on bond retirement and interest—is not sufficient to operate a water softener and an increase in water rates or in general taxes would be required.

Many Protests Heard

Investigation of the financial condition of the waterworks department reveals these facts. They are presented today in answer to scores and scores of telephone calls and letters received at The News office urging city officials to go slow on the water softener plans until more information is available.

Little information about costs was given by city officials at a meeting of business men last Monday night. Mayor Harroff said he could not answer questions and referred the group to City Engineer F. S. Barckhoff.

Barckhoff admitted that the estimate of $12,000 for annual operating costs was a minimum estimate and that the system probably would cost more. He made no reference to his earlier estimate of $45,000 for water softener installation, which amount is proposed to take from the waterworks fund.

He admitted no facts had been obtained from investigation of softeners in other Ohio cities and he could not give even an estimate of the degree of hardness to be produced by the softener. That would depend upon the amount of money available, he said.

No Money For Assistant

The mayor said he thought a softener would save each family $18 a year in soap and softening products, but the engineer raised this guess to $24 a year. Neither had any basis for his estimate.

Although no facts are available as to costs of installation and operation, council at its last meeting provided for the employment of an assistant to the engineer to prepare plans for a softener. It appeared today that, if the assistant has started to work, he cannot collect his pay until council appropriates the money from the water department. It is said to do in its emergency legislation.

When an investigation of other softening systems is made, city officials will discover that a softener, installed by New Philadelphia some time ago, is not in operation because that city cannot pay the operating costs. It has not been in use for several months.

Two "Short Change" Artists flee With $10

Short-change artists fled with $10 after bewitching a girl clerk in the Lease drug store, E. State st. at S. Lincoln ave., at 8 p. m. Thursday.

While one of two women, who had entered the store, discussed drugs with William Kaminsky, manager, the other woman purchased a package of cigarettes from the clerk. Given back her change from a $2 bill, the customer asked that a $10 bill be changed and then requested that she be given back her original $20.

In the hurried transaction the woman obtained an extra $10 from the girl employee. The shortage was discovered soon after the woman left the store.

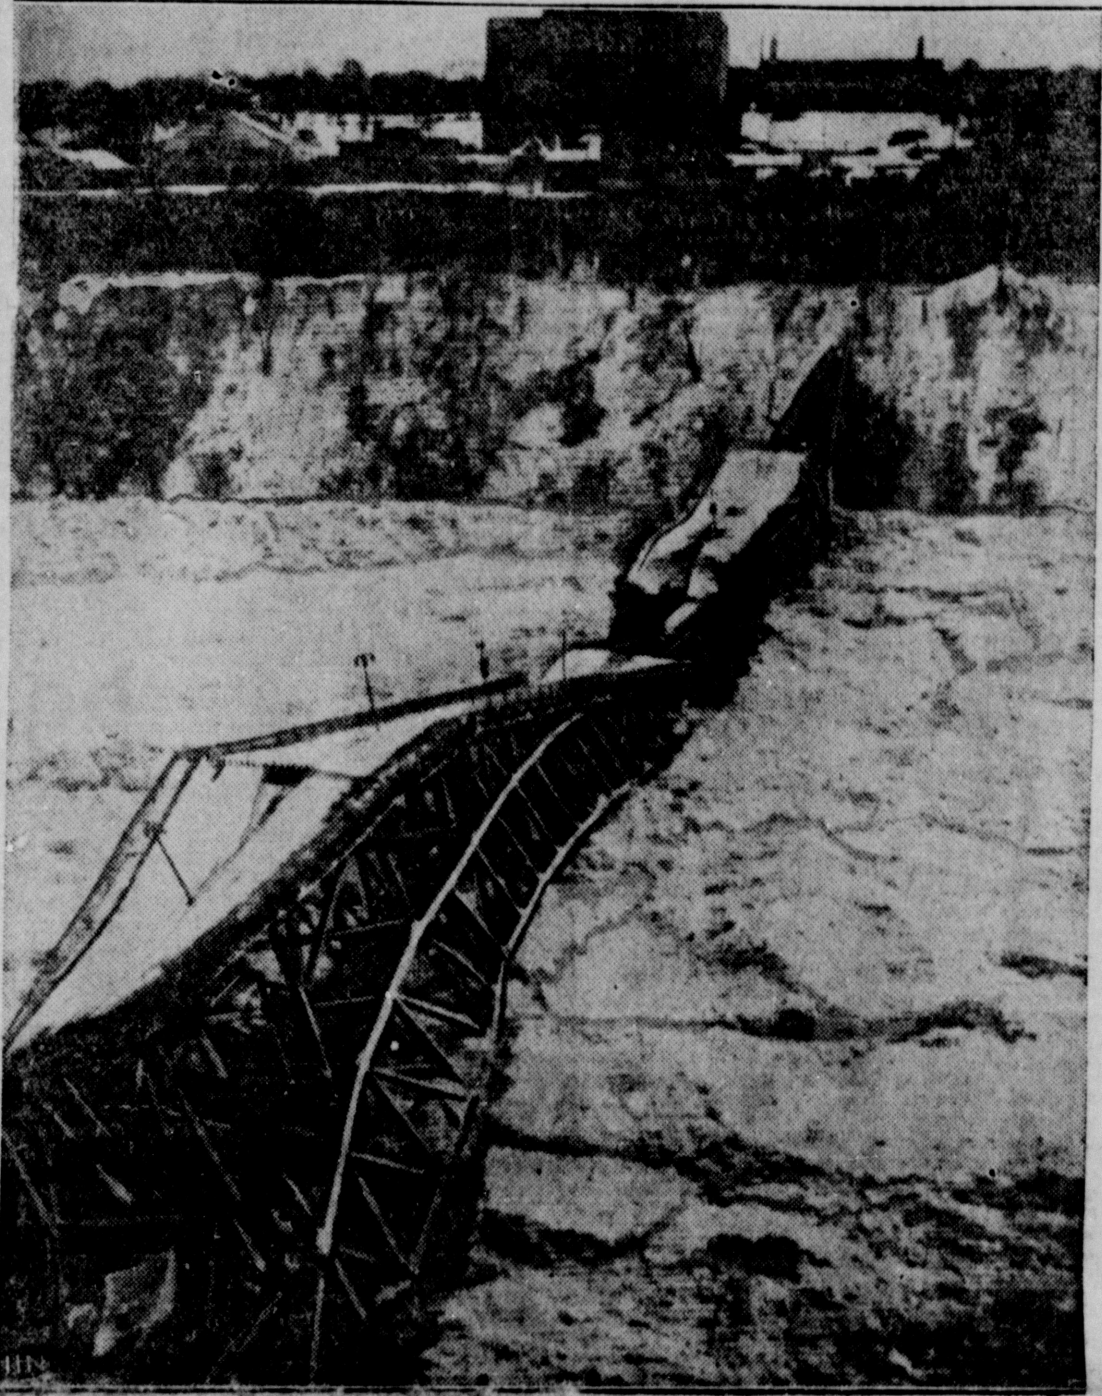

One woman was tall and slim and the other was short and heavy-set. Both were about 28 years old, and they wore fur coats. Patrolmen Nerr Gaunt and James Hassey were told.

NEW AND FINER BRIDGE PLANNED

Owners at Work As Skeleton of Old Span Settles Into Ice

(By Associated Press)
NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Jan. 28.—A new and greater "Honeymoon Bridge" was planned at Niagara Falls today even as the gaunt skeleton of the old bridge which crashed yesterday continued to groan and settle into the ice-covered river.

The International Railway company, owners of the fallen span, announced that architects will be asked at once to design a new and finer span.

It will rise from the site of the 39-year-old steel arch which crashed 200 feet into the Niagara gorge late yesterday, after resisting for two days the worst Niagara ice jam in many years.

An international crowd of several thousand lined the lofty banks of Niagara gorge today for a glimpse of twisted steel and concrete on the icy carpet far below.

All that remained of America's famous "Honeymoon Bridge" was a roar that drowned the cataract's thunder, the towering structure succumbed late yesterday.

The judge sentenced him to serve from one to 20 years in the Mansfield reformatory.

SCOUT DINNER IS SCHEDULED

Annual Gathering of Salem Boy Scouts Will Be Held Feb. 8 in Memorial Building

Plans are being prepared for the annual coverdinner dinner and program for the Salem Boy Scouts, their fathers and scout officials.

Commissioner Eddie Howell announced today that the affair will be held Tuesday, Feb. 8, in the Memorial building when the scouts will be observing the 28th anniversary of the founding of the scout movement in America.

The program will include the screening of motion pictures taken during the national jamboree in Washington, D. C., last summer.

Cash Allotted For Poor Relief Bonds From Sales Revenue

County Commissioner Austin I. Getz of Salem expressed doubt today that the county would have funds left for poor relief out of a $32,001 distribution from state sales tax revenue, announced today by State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

The state allocation of sales tax funds is for retirement of outstanding poor relief bonds, but under a law enacted at the current state legislature session, counties receiving an amount in excess of requirements for bond retirement may use the difference for direct poor relief.

The money distributed to Ohio counties totals $2,750,000, an Associated Press report shows.

The state auditor's office disclosed also it was preparing for distribution next week the January allotment of $570,000 for counties under the law allocating $6,500,000 annually from sales tax funds for poor relief.

County allocations will be on the basis of their tax duplicates averaged for the past five years. These grants must be matched by local communities, $1 local money for each $2 state funds.

The February allocation probably will be made about Feb. 10, the auditor's office said.

HUNT FILLING STATION KILLER

Bandit Slays Patrolman At Hamilton During Battle

HAMILTON, Jan. 28.—Police throughout southwestern Ohio put all available manpower today into a hunt for a filling station bandit who shot and killed Patrolman Aaron Laubach, 30, as he sought to end a series of hold-ups.

Police Chief John C. Calhoun and Detective Sergeant Herschel Haines joined Clark county and Springfield officers and a squad of state highway patrolmen at Donnelsville, eight miles west of Springfield, early today in an unsuccessful effort to capture a suspect there.

Wrecks His Auto

Corporal F. T. Shinn of the patrol reported the suspect wrecked his automobile on a stone abutment in Donnelsville and fled through a yard late last night, only a few hours after Laubach was slain here.

Two hours later the suspect had been traced to a cemetery and several shots had been fired at him, but tracks in the snow led to a bridge and were lost. Patrol headquarters in Columbus said there was no positive identification of the man as Laubach's slayer, but Shinn said a bullet pouch was recovered from the blood-stained wreckage of the car.

Laubach, who joined the force in 1930 and was married Christmas day, 1936, had just entered the filling station in civilian clothes and taken a seat in a corner to guard it through the night. A bandit had

Jap Ware Boycott Spreads To Parks

The National Brotherhood of Operative Pottery economic boycott drive against Japan was extended to amusement parks today when operators were urged to ban the sale of Nipponese merchandise.

Thirty concessionaires at Meyers Lake park, Canton, where the pottery's annual outing usually is held, have signed pledge cards to sell only American merchandise, William Watkins, chairman of the brotherhood's picnic committee, said.

Sebring and Irwin, Tenn., plan boycott demonstrations, while a house-to-house canvass is under way in East Palestine, to obtain pledges against the purchase of products manufactured in the land of the Rising Sun.

DEFENSE PROGRAM MAPPED

President Calls Upon
Congress to Aid National Security

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—President Roosevelt asked congress today to authorize millions of new expenditures on the navy's fighting force and army's land defenses to bolster armaments he termed "inadequate for purposes of national security."

Outstanding among the President's requests for armed "protection" based "not on aggression but on defense" was a 20 per cent increase in the navy building program.

Navy officials estimated the cost would be $800,000,000.

Mr. Roosevelt also recommended spending $17,330,000 for betterment of the army, including $8,800,000 for anti-aircraft material.

Estimates Cost
The program he outlined calls for building two additional battleships and two additional cruisers during the calendar year 1938. Mr. Roosevelt estimated, in discussing the message at his press conference, that the cost of entire new long-range program would be $29,200,000 during the fiscal year that begins next July 1.

The President coupled to his request for better national defense a recommendation that congress provide for taking the profits out of war and for "the equalization of burdens of possible war."

He said he recommended increased armaments "specifically and solely because of the piling up of additional land and sea armaments in other countries, in such manner as to involve a threat to world peace and security."

Hasn't Lost Hope for Peace
He said that while as "a peaceful nation," this country would not abandon "active search" for agreements to limit war and end aggression, "it is clear that until such agreement is reached—and I have not given up hope of it—we are compelled to think of our own national safety."

"It is with the deepest regret," Mr. Roosevelt said, "that I report to you that armaments increase today at an unprecedented and alarming rate. It is an ominous fact that at least one-fourth of the world's population is involved in merciless devastating conflict in spite of the fact that most people in most countries, including those where conflict rages, wish to live at peace."

"Armies are fighting in the far east and in Europe; thousands of civilians are being driven from their homes."

Miss Mary Lucas, his housekeeper, found his body in the barn where he had gone to kill a sheep. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Born at Atwater, April 27, 1876, he was the son of Cyrus and Eva Campbell Stickle. He had resided in this vicinity for the last 16 years. His wife died 36 years ago.

Surviving is a daughter, Mrs. Edith Wolfe of Alliance and a son, Warren, Buffalo, N. Y.

The body was taken from the Eells funeral home to the Myers parlors at Alliance this afternoon where the funeral service will be held either Saturday or Sunday. Burial will be at Atwater.

E. Liverpool Mayor Bans Lottery Plan

EAST LIVERPOOL, Jan. 28.—Mayor Lee Copenhaver today banned the lottery insurance racket here.

He instructed police to warn four out-of-town agents who for several weeks have been selling insurance on theater "bank night" sweepstakes in a house-to-house canvass.

"We will not tolerate this racket, which is a violation of the gambling law," Copenhaver said.

Municipal officials said the racketeers may be prosecuted under the state insurance law.

Reports to police indicated the lottery insurance netted the operators $470 last week, the result of 10-cent policies on "bank night" at a local theater.

A FAMILIAR SOUND

The President's general proposition that workers should not bear the burden of a "temporary business recession"—that management and capital, instead, should take all the loss and, furthermore, should cut prices to stimulate volume buying in order to restore production—sounds all right. Few will argue about it on the "temporary" basis.

"If industries reduce wages this winter and spring they will be deliberately encouraging the withholding of buying—they will be fostering a downward spiral and they will make it necessary for their government to consider other means of creating purchasing power," Mr. Roosevelt warns. This has a familiar sound.

It is the same attitude the government held before 1933, when prosperity was just around the corner. Wages were to be held up, on the theory that cutting them would aggravate deflation. The Ford Motor Co., it is recalled, went so far as to raise wages, contrary to the prevailing trend. The technique of spending public money to create purchasing power wasn't so well developed then as it is now, though President Hoover adopted the principle of public works to offset decreasing private employment, but it was recognized that purchasing power was a prime necessity in dealing with a downward spiral of business activity. Ultimately, however, as prices sagged further and further, wages could not be held up any longer, not because capital and management wanted to let them collapse but because the wherewithal to pay them was lacking.

Wage reductions do affect purchasing power, no doubt about it. Every intelligent employer would prefer never to reduce wages again in his life. That would mean an end to hard times, which is like saying that if there were no more red spots there would be no more measles. For wage reductions are not the cause of slumps; they are an effect.

As one of the factors in cost of production, wages reflect the conditions of production, regardless of the system. A Russian workman who goes hungry because his food card doesn't entitle him to the food he wants and an American workman who can't buy enough to eat on the wages he makes both know that eating is more important than economic theory. When times are good, they eat. When times are bad, they are hungry. No one yet has discovered the secret of constant prosperity.

In other words, the key to the President's proposition about maintaining wages is the duration of the recession. If, as he believes, it is temporary, he can depend on employers to try to maintain wages, just as President Hoover was able to depend on them to cooperate so long as they were able to stand the strain. But in a long recession, depression, or whatever it may be called, wages inevitably will reflect deflation, not to please management, not to please bondholders, not to please Mr. Roosevelt, nor to aggravate the depression, but because it's impossible to squeeze blood out of a turnip. This is true despite exceptional cases which may be paraded in an attempt to prove the contrary.

As for price reductions, which the President now urges as desirable, it only is necessary to remember that price boosting was the aim in 1933, 1934 and 1935 to understand that here is something which will need little encouragement from central authority if business activity does not resume an upward trend. The President speaks for every American in hoping the slump in production and buying will be temporary.

It's easy to imagine Herbert Hoover sending a postcard to Franklin D. Roosevelt at the White House: "How're you doing and please accept my sympathy."

PINK FURIES

Everybody inclined to buy another book knows by this time Sinclair Lewis has written a new one, so this won't have any effect one way or the other on his "The Prodigal Parents."

It does seem a good idea to relieve the tension over this book by recommending that it be regarded with a chuckle. The pinks are just so darned mad they could burst. Some of them have—all over sheets of previously clean paper.

The trouble is the Lewis prod has been rammed into them instead of the "class enemy"—the well known Babbitt group. In this latest book, the objects of mirth are pinks and the heroes are whites. This makes Sinclair Lewis fit company for H. L. Mencken, who calls the wild-eyed boys and girls "bedbug intelligentsia."

It's too bad the edge has been worn off the phrase, "You can't take it." The fury of the pinks over being held up to ridicule is almost awesome, but it's funny, too. They can't take it; dishing it out is their specialty.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Artistic quirks: A. B. Frost, dean of the rural delineators, worked best in an old Pasadena barn filled with junk. Howard Chandler Christy was once pronounced incurably blind. Today he does not even wear glasses at his work. Herb Roth is huskiest of the pen and ink sketchers.

Pay King has been a cartoonist for 25 years, one of the few women to continue so long and ably at the drawing board. Vic Forsythe is also a fine painter. He lives on a ranch and wears cowboy costumes. Cliff McBride has a St. Bernard dog that goes with him everywhere.

Gus Edson, who now draws the "Gumps," is double-jointed and twists into all sorts of positions at the drawing board. Frank Willard, the "Moon Mullins" man, no matter how hot the weather, wears a sweater and leather jacket. H. T. Webster spends six months a year in Florida fishing.

Jimmy Swinnerton spends most of his time with Navajo Indians painting the desert. Clare "Dwig" Dwigins hates to comb his hair. Gene Ahern always just beats the deadline with his stuff while Bob Brinkerhoff once got enough Mary Mixup strips ahead to circle the globe.

Harry O'Neill, who draws "Broncho Bill," has never been west of the Mississippi and Al Capp, who draws hill-billy stuff, has never been in the Southern mountains. George Herriman, "Krazy Kat" artist, once told his employers they paid him too much and to cut his salary. They did!

The busiest mid-town telephone switchboard is at Joe Leblang's cut rate ticket agency just before curtain time. Next to the Major Bowes amateur vote during his broadcasts, the calls are swiftest at Leblang's, one of the few agencies to ride out the theater slump. Third on the list of busy exchanges in the Times Square area is the Astor at the cocktail hour. Further east the most popular meeting places are the Waldorf and Savoy-Plaza bars.

Conde Nast is the most expert of the town's gadabouts. Although the hard working head of a vast publishing business, he finds time to be everywhere and see everything. And with all appears to be the youngest gentleman for his years hereabouts. One of the few original New Yorkers, he is 63 and has a daughter 37 and one 7. There is scarcely a night in the year he is not in dinner jacket or white tie at some affair in a private home or restaurant or at the opera or play. Once or twice a year he goes abroad and in London and Paris, where he is equally well known, keeps up the same social rigamarole. And always looks as fresh as the proverbial daisy.

Most Manhattan oldsters who try to maintain the pace after middle years have the unhealthy shine of a cicatrix. They doddle about, trying to look all merry and bright, and suggesting George Arliss in one of his elderly roles. At first nights, some are often gently snoring at the drop of the first curtain. Living symbols of the amusing line in Ivor Novella's London hit: Chin up, white tie for dinner and carry on!

Sinclair Lewis and his wife, Dorothy Thompson, are neck and neck in lecture tour popularity. Each is in high demand, having far more invitations than they can fill. John Mason Brown, the dramatic critic, is another of the popular platform talkers. Lecture bureau pay runs from $100 to $800 an appearance, plus expenses. Most established lecturers enjoy the actual work but soon become fed up with the social demands that have become almost an inevitable part of the tour—receptions, teas, luncheons, dinners and talking to bores.

Incidentally, the mid-Victorian quartette is again attaining favor, not only on the radio, in vaudeville and movies but as a part of the lecture olio. Today those favorite old standbys, The Avon Comedy Four, That Quartette and other fixtures in vaudeville could get solid booking over the lecture trails. And the songs the new generation as well as the old enjoy hearing most are the ancient familiars, "By the Old Mill Stream," "Sweet Adeline," and such. The quartette is a study in wish fulfillment. Almost every man has a secret desire to blend his voice in harmony, even though he may not be able to sing a note. One of my unfulfilled ambitions was quartetting. I always wanted to be the Morton Downey tenor on the left who stepped forth and twisted his cap into a ball trying to reach a high note.

PORK

Whether pork is suitable for human consumption is an age-old question that has excited much discussion. Its use was prohibited by the Mosaic law.

Outside of the theological or historical objections to pork, there is involved in the matter at least one important medical danger that must never be overlooked. There can be no doubt that failure thoroughly to cook this meat has resulted in many cases of disease, disease which produced suffering and loss of time.

Dr. Copeland

The latest outbreak of trouble from this cause occurred among C. C. workers at Camp Smith in Vermont. There were more than 40 victims of "trichinosis".

The disease produced much misery, including swollen and inflamed eyes.

Recalls Epidemic

When I was a medical student, taking the prescribed course in histology and microscopy, there happened to be an outbreak of this disease in a nearby town. Some of these cases proved fatal and our professor obtained a portion of muscle from one of the victims. This was prepared for examination and, after careful staining, the tissue was made ready for study under the microscope.

In my mind's eye I can see that specimen. Coiled up, looking like a tiny snail-shell, was the offending organism, which in egg form had found its way into the blood. Carried to a distant part of the body, it escaped from the blood stream and burrowed into a muscle of the upper arm.

The infected pork contains "trichinae", tiny worms really. When the eggs or larvae are swallowed with the meat, they develop into adult worms, multiply rapidly in the intestinal tract, and may finally reach the muscles, as I have explained.

Symptoms of Ailment

There are early and acute symptoms indicating intestinal trouble. Sickness at the stomach, colicky pains and diarrhea occur. When the muscles become involved there is severe muscular pain, as well as stiffness of the parts. Later there may be great difficulty in breathing, fever and swelling of the invaded regions.

Under modern treatment, there is unlikely to be any fatality, but it isn't pleasant to have this disease. In a sense, it is revolting, too, but there is no excuse for having it. Thorough cooking of the pork will kill any trichinae it may carry, and, of course, few animals are infected. Modern care and meat inspection guard us against danger. It is an accident nowadays when a case of trichinosis occurs.

A.—If you eat a well-balanced diet, you will not have to worry about the various minerals and vitamins found in the different foods. For full particulars, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

A. D. Q.—I am suffering from asthma and hay fever and the condition is further complicated by hives. I have had various tests and treatment. What would you advise in my case?

A.—Make every effort to improve your general state of health and resistance. Overcome any underlying disorder. Keep the intestinal tract clear. For further particulars, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and repeat your question.

Mrs. J. H. V. Q.—What can be done for catarrhal bronchitis? I have a severe case and suffer with it.

MANSFIELD—Mrs. Mary Beasore, 98 years old, chuckles reminiscently when anyone mentions scientific methods of rearing children. She recalls that her own cradle was a covered wagon, jolting over rough prairies, and that as a substitute for milk she drank black coffee.

"GIVE HER WINGS" by MARIE BLIZARD

CHAPTER XXVIII
Her adaptability Julie thought with a slight stab of conscience, would probably get her into trouble some day. Perhaps someone else, she thought of Dick Jessup. Because she had been so adaptable that she had been able to see herself contented as the wife of a small town physician, she had probably broken his heart.
Pity for him brought tears to her eyes. Poor old Dick! A man of sixty going home tired to an empty house, loving one woman all his life, traveling alone because he couldn't have the woman he loved. But he would always be her friend. Whenever she went to Fayette, she'd go to see him, bring him some thoughtful little present she'd brought from some far corner of the earth. She'd be kind; she'd never mention her great happiness, never tell him of Paul's unwavering devotion.
Her thoughts swung back to Paul. Paul at forty giving her a string of matchless pearls to celebrate their tenth wedding anniversary. Paul at fifty Gray and handsome. A power in Wall Street. The two of them holding hands under the fur rug in their town car. She'd call for him every day. Paul sighed tired, saying, "Julie, my beloved partner. Something I think I couldn't go on if it weren't for you. You've always been my inspiration, my strength!" She'd press his hand gently and say, "Ours has been an idyll, Paul." Then she'd smile. "Do you remember the night you asked me to go away with you for a week-end? You never knew how much I wanted to!"
No, indeed, he would never know! Julie knew best, she said to herself. If Paul was not already in love with her, he would be.
Wondering how he felt this morning, she got up and dressed hurriedly, telling the maid she would have her breakfast in the dining-room.
The others were already breakfasting. She heard their voices through the open doors to the terrace.
Paul was standing at the sideboard serving himself from silver-covered dishes.
Nancy and Hank Smith were finishing their breakfast at the table.
"We're shooting some golf," Nancy said. "Want to come along?"
Julie, noting that Paul was not dressed for golf, said she thought not. To Paul she said, "For a girl who had a sleepless night, I have an astonishing appetite." She said it as if with shy, happy reluctance. And gave him a moment to adapt himself to what was required of him.
He gave her a brief, speculative glance, saw that her expression was bland, guileless.
When the others were gone and they lingered over their coffee, he said, "Can it be true?"
"True?" Her eyes widened questioningly.
"Is this all on the level?"
She permitted herself to sigh with a hint of exasperation. "What do you mean, Paul? I don't understand you when you're cryptic."
She looked so pretty, so perplexed, so appealing, he answered, "I'm afraid it is. Only I didn't think they made innocent little girls anymore."
"Isn't that I'm so... so innocent," she said hesitantly. "Only... Well, I guess you wouldn't understand if I tried to explain it to you."
"You could try."
Her eyes went appealing to him, with a sort of plea.
"I haven't really been around every much," she said with her eyes on the table while she toyed with a spoon. "You have. All the people in your set are sophisticated. I am, too, in my point of view. But at heart, I'm a small-town girl."
"You've come a long way for a small-town girl," he answered drily. Julie preferred not to understand him. "Yes, to California! And now here!" she agreed. "But that's different. Flying is something apart. You know about that—you fly! I did that not for glory but because it was the adventure of my life! I shall never forget what that meant to me. To have had the feeling for a little while that I wasn't mortal as man is! To have flown above the clouds! To have travelled like a bird on such swift wings! To have landed in a great adventure!"
"My! My!"
"You're laughing at me!" she reproached.
"On the contrary I'm delighted. I didn't know anyone outside of books felt that way. Except that I don't believe you did."
"Can't you take a little kidding. Beautiful? If you felt that way, more power to you. As far as I'm concerned you can get away with anything you like. You've got under my skin. You're new and fresh and adorable! Underneath I suspect you are like all women."

She bit her under-lip and shook her head. "I guess I just don't understand you, Paul. In one breath you say lovely things, and in the next you are almost insulting. What are all women like underneath?"
"Wary. Living in the future and minding the present. Knowing what they're going to get. Guarding the means to getting it. Perhaps, sometimes, playing innocent to do it."
He had called her game so perfectly! Under her lowered lashes she gathered her forces before making her next move.
"Paul, I think now I do understand you. But I am convinced that you don't know me. And that you're being unfair! I'm going to... to use bold words. We seem to be talking around the edges of something. Aren't we? Don't you mean that you didn't believe me when I told you why I couldn't... couldn't..."
"I couldn't accept my invitation?" He picked up her sentence.
"Yes."
"Well, then, what are the bold words?"
"I meant what I said. You're terribly attractive to me. That's more important than the other thing."
"Of course, I don't believe you, but go on. What's the other thing?"
"Paul, you know Fayette. You know how small it is, what a long time a lifetime is there. I have to spend my lifetime there. Perhaps I'll make a good life for myself. Perhaps I'll marry someone and do all the other things that women do to fill up their lives. I don't really know about that but I'm sure I'll have to stay in Fayette. I don't want to spend the rest of my life with a memory that will make me unhappy for all of it."
When she finished, her face was grave and she pushed her hair back from her forehead with a weary gesture. "Things like that do happen, you know."
"Yes," he answered. She knew from the tone of his voice that he was moved. And flattered.
The time had come to change the mood. "Come on, Paul! Let's play a little tennis and not get so serious about these things."
"You don't mind if I still want to go on kissing you, do you?" Paul called across the tennis court. Julie answered, "Twelve all! I wish I did." She served a fast ball.

"You can't blame me for keeping on trying?" She could hardly hear him and hoped that no one else could.
Smashing a ball high in the air she shouted, "You don't look like a quitter to me."
Later, when they had thrown their rackets on the grass and sat on the lawn to cool off, Paul with his head in her lap, Julie said, "You have had fair warning, Paul. If you persist and are disappointed, it's your responsibility."
"Heart-breaker!"
She tousled his head and he reached up to put his arms around her.
"Oh so sorry!" Neither of them had heard Nancy come round the play-house.
Paul jumped up. "It's all right, Nancy, won't you join us on the greensward?"
Nancy said no thank you.
"I was looking for you to tell you that Elsa is back from Bar Harbor. She telephoned you a few minutes ago—Parker didn't know you were here—to say that she would be out on the six o'clock train."
Julie asked to be excused, said she had to write some letters.
She wrote them with a vengeance. Long ones to keep her mind off the disquieting memory that Nancy had said the Elsa person had telephoned Paul to say she was coming out; not telephoned Nancy whose house she was coming to.
In her letter to Althea, she wrote a glowing account of the social whirl in which she was engaged. Not forgetting to mention the attractive men, the number of servants and her own new wardrobe.
In one envelope she enclosed notes to her father, to Priscilla and to Cosy. She found she could talk about scenery, puppies and people but she couldn't find anything to write to Dick. No one was ill at Pennybrook and she had never had much to say to Dick. Dick's brief, illegible notes to her since she had left had asked for no return. They'd been little notes to say that he hoped she was having a good time. Fatherly, kind notes.
She didn't want fatherly, kind things. She wanted young love. She wanted Paul. She wanted a man who knew his own mind and couldn't be handled by a girl. She wanted more than she was ready to give. And she meant to have it in spite of whoever Elsa was.

Perhaps she was Paul's sister, the one he had told her about. Her mood lightened swiftly. Didn't girls always anticipate rivalry when they were in love? Put the wrong complexion on all matters pertaining to other girls?
She felt better when she went downstairs to lunch. Paul seemed no different, she saw with relief. He didn't appear to be anticipating anything like the arrival of a special girl. He was no less attentive to her. He didn't even mention the other girl's name. Perhaps she wasn't a girl. Perhaps she'd be fat and middle-aged.

NEW AND FINER BRIDGE PLANNED

to a 30-hour battering by the worst Niagara ice jam in 30 years.
Second Span to Fall
It was the second span on the site to fall from attacks by nature. In 1889 a giant suspension span was blown down in a gale. Thousands of tons of steel plunged 200 feet onto the grinding river ice, so thick that it prevented the shattered bridge remnants from sinking into the 175-foot depths of Niagara river. Even the gigantic lights on the falls were out last night because the generating plant of the Ontario Hydro Electric commission was covered almost entirely by the ice jam and forced to close.
Company officials estimated damage at nearly a million dollars. U. S. Meteorologist James H. Spencer, at Buffalo, blamed a "combination of bad weather circumstances" for the collapse of the bridge. "Thin ice on Lake Erie, a five-day January thaw, and nearly three days of constant high winds caused the disaster," he said, explaining that the thaw cracked up the thin lake ice and the winds sent it tumbling into the Niagara river, over the falls and down the gorge where it jammed against the bridge.
Hurled Against Walls
The "Maid of the Mist" twin steamboats which have carried thousands of tourists to the falls and as famous as the bridge itself, were barely visible downstream where they had been hurled against the walls of the gorge by the ice. Meanwhile Canadian - U. S. traffic was being routed over the Peace bridge at Buffalo, and two other bridges below the falls.

President Calls On Congress To Aid National Security

their homes and bombed from the air."

New Factors Seen

Mr. Roosevelt said it was necessary to realize that the "unfortunate world conditions of today have resulted too often in the discarding of those principles and treaties which underlie international law and order; and in the entrance of many new factors into the actual conduct of war."

"Adequate defense means," he said, "that for the protection not only of our coasts but also of our communities far removed from the coast, we must keep any potential enemy many hundred miles away from our continental limits."

"Adequate defense affects therefore the simultaneous defense of every part of the United States of America."

With these factors in mind, the President recommended specifically:

(1) That there be authorized for the army of the United States additions to anti-aircraft materiel in the sum of $8,800,000 and that of this sum $6,800,000 be appropriated for the fiscal year 1939.

(2) That there be authorized and appropriated for the better establishment of an enlisted reserve for the army the sum of $450,000.

(3) That there be authorized the expenditure of $6,000,000 for the manufacture of gauges, dies and other aids to manufacture of army materiel, the sum of $5,000,000 thereof to be expended during the fiscal year 1939.

(4) That the sum of $2,000,000 be authorized and appropriated toward the making up of deficiencies in ammunition for the army.

(5) That the existing authorized building program for increases and replacements in the navy be increased by 20 per cent.

(6) That this congress authorize and appropriate for the laying down of two additional battleships and two additional cruisers during the calendar year 1938. This will call for the expenditure of a very small amount of government funds during the fiscal year 1939.

(7) That the congress authorize and appropriate a sum not to exceed $15,000,000 for the construction of a number of new types of small vessels, such construction to be regarded as experimental in the light of new developments among navies; and to include the preparation of plans for other types of ships in the event that it may be necessary to construct such ships in the future.

Stackin' Champ

utility of Miss Loy's love for Pidgeon. To him she confesses that she still loves Pidgeon and will exert every power to win him back.

When the honeymoon is over, Miss Loy resumes her siege, while Tone, loving Miss Loy, stands aside. Miss Russell discovers Pidgeon in Miss Loy's rooms and offers him a divorce with the understanding that he will lose his job with her wealthy father. Pidgeon refuses to accept a divorce and returns to his wife, and Miss Loy turns to Tone realizing at last that they were meant for each other.

A distinguished supporting cast includes Rita Johnson, Nana Bryant, Ruth Hussey, Leonard Penn, Phil Miljen, William Stack, Oscar O'Shea and Dan Tobey.

Bob Patterson, played by Starrett, solves the rancher's problem.

BROOKFIELD "5" HERE TONIGHT

Replaces Warren; Daughter of Coach Hill Dies Suddenly

reserve outfit from some nearby school in the preliminary game, starting at 7:30. The varsity contest will start at 8:45 with John Gabor of Alliance and Clayton Schlemmer of Akron officiating.

Cope declared that tickets for the Warren game will be honored at the gate tonight. In case ticket holders do not wish to see the Brookfield game, their money will be refunded, Cope said.

Death Unexpected
The death of Hill's daughter, which caused Warren school heads to ask postponement of the game, came unexpectedly early this morning.

The girl had undergone a mastoid operation several weeks ago and was apparently on the way to recovery when she suffered a relapse yesterday, due to a heart condition. She was taken to a Warren hospital where she died at 6:45 a. m. today.

In addition to her parents, the child is survived by one sister, Carloline, at home.

Hill has been head of the Warren High school athletic department for the last seven years. His daughter Judy was born on Thanksgiving day of the first year he was coach at the Trumbull county school.

Warren is the second team to postpone a floor contest with the Quakers this season. Early in the 1937-38 campaign, Boardman was forced to postpone a scheduled contest because of icy roads.

The Boardman game was later cancelled because it was impossible for the two teams to agree on a date for re-scheduling the contest.

Quakers Have Dates
Attempts to re-book the Salem-Warren game are expected to be made late next week at the convenience of Coach Hill. The Quakers have several dates available before the season closes and it is hoped that one of these will be suitable for the Warren game.

If no agreement can be reached and the contest should be cancelled, the Quakers' regular schedule for the 1937-38 season would be cut to 13 games, making it one of the smallest Class A slates in the state. Fifteen games were booked for the Red and Black team at the start of the season and this schedule was considerably smaller than ones of previous years.

An able replacement for the Presidents, Brookfield comes here tonight with a splendid team, capable of offering the Quakers just as stiff a test as they would have received from Warren.

Although loser of four games thus far, Brookfield has scored several important victories, including a 30 to 12 triumph over Campbell Memorial. Other wins credited to the team are over Lowellville, Youngstown, Woodrow Wilson, Highland and Hartford.

Sciencville, which is classed as one of the leading Class A teams in the state with a record of 10 straight wins, is one of the teams boasting a victory over Brookfield.

Coach Herb Brown plans no change in lineup due to the switching of opponents. He is expected to give the starting call to Ollie Olea and Jim Dickey at forwards, Max Lutsch at center and Gilbert Everhart and Bill Schaeffer at guards.

Glenn (Dinty) McLaughlin, the first freshman Brown has ever used on his varsity, and Amos Dunlap are expected to break into the lineup in substitute roles.

Throughout practice sessions this week, Brown has stressed offensive drill, attempting to develop his charges into taking advantage of the "breaks" they make through mid-court ball-handling.

Failure to take advantage of the opportunities they create by pulling their opponents out of position with clever pass work in mid-court has been one of the Quakers' most glaring weaknesses in their games to date. On numerous occasions in past games, especially the close ones, the Quakers have been "tied up" in mid-court because they failed to make their scoring bid at the right time.

Brown also has been working with his two pivot men, Lutsch and Schaeffer, in attempting to open their eyes to the numerous shooting opportunities they have been passing up in past games.

Both Lutsch and Schaeffer have been performing capably in pulling in rebounds but neither has taken full advantage of chances offered to take short shots at the basket.

Foul shooting is another phase which has come in for considerable stress during practice sessions. So far this season, the Quakers have performed below par in the free throw department. Only one regular, Schaeffer, has made more fouls than he has missed and the team as a whole is below 500 percent in converting free throws.

In eight games the Quakers have shot 111 free throws, but have made only 55 of these. The varsity quintet has tossed 99 of the free throws, making only 48.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo.—The Cripple Creek mines produced more than 500,000 tons of ore in 1937, with an estimated gross value of $5,083,000.

There's No Place Like the Farm Says Family After Visit To City

(By United Press)
DENVER—If it's a farm, there is no place like home, according to the Gilmores of Fowler, Colo., but a city home is something entirely different.

Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Gilmore, 67 and 62, and their eldest son, Harry, 40, traveled the distance from their farm outside Fowler to Denver—151 miles—for the first time recently, and after viewing the hustle and bustle of the city decided the quiet life of the farm was the real Utopia after all.

It must have been an urge for adventure that suddenly cropped out to result in the trip. The elder Gilmore was born and reared in Pueblo county, but had never seen Denver. His wife came to Colorado 57 years ago, and she had never entered the capital city. Of course, Harry hadn't. His interest was in helping till the farm with his father.

"Just never had any desire before to come to such a big place as Denver, so we never did," the senior Gilmore said. One time, however, Gilmore went by train to Idaho, his only trip out of the state.

Several years ago the Gilmores decided that Harry wasn't very widely traveled and ought to take a trip out of the state; so they drove him across the state line into Kansas and back.

"Why, this traffic here and all the people on the streets—it is terrible!" Mrs. Gilmore said. "I can't imagine what New York or Chicago would be like!"

Gilmore was interested in seeing the streamlined trains. He had heard a lot about them. The city park and the museum intrigued the Gilmores most of the big city sights.

The wild animals of the city park zoo held no attraction for them.

"I was just a little curious to see Cherry creek," Gilmore said. "My father often told me about the big safe filled with money that was lost during the Cherry creek flood of 1864."

"My father decided to come to make his fortune in Colorado gold, so he went to Central City in the early '60s. At that time the end of the railroad line was in Iowa City. It took him six months to walk from there to the mountains."

"Like many prospectors, he failed to find the gold he expected and decided to settle down to farming. He took a homestead and it is on that same farm that we now live. It is on the old Santa Fe trail, or what is now known as U. S. highway No. 56."

Gilmore said that he and Harry weren't interested in big city life at all, but were content just to live a quiet life farming, "which we have done all our lives."

However, the Gilmores have another son, Elmer, 32, who is "well traveled." Elmer has been to Denver at least a dozen times. He lives near Fowler, too, and works for a railroad.

It was a happy trio that left the city to return to the barnyard sounds that had a more satisfactory effect in inducing slumber than the clanging street cars of the city.

HUNT FILLING STATION KILLER

held up Claude May, 45, the attendant, Jan. 15 and escaped with $125 and there had been several similar robberies in the neighborhood.

The robber entered, holding a pistol pointed at the floor.

"This is a stick-up," he told May. "I want the dough."

May gave him the contents of the cash register, but the bandit demanded "the money hidden under the counter."

Shooting Begins
As the bandit stooped Laubach tried to maneuver into another corner to get behind him. But the man wheeled around and snapped, "no, you don't."

The shooting broke out. May said he could not tell who fired first, but Laubach was struck three times while he fired his own gun twice. May ducked behind the counter.

When he came out, the bandit had fled and Laubach was lying on the floor dying.

All available police were called out and the Ohio highway patrol and Indiana state police notified. Roads were blocked north of the city, in which direction the man fled, apparently alone, in an automobile. Police were uncertain whether or not the fugitive had been wounded.

May made no robbery report. Patrolman Arthur Spones was slain last March attempting to frustrate a restaurant burglary. William Hobbs is awaiting death March 10 in the electric chair in Columbus for Spones' slaying and John Agnew and Vincent Rose are serving life terms.

EXPECT 25 TEAMS TO ENTER BOWLING TOURNEY

PRIZE LIST FOR KEGLING EVENT SET NEXT WEEK

Association to Make Final Plans For City Bowling Tourney

Indications today were that more than 20 five-man teams will compete in the annual City Handicap Tenpin tournament which will be held at the Grate Recreation alleys from Monday, Feb. 7 until Friday, Feb. 18.

While entries are still somewhat slow in coming in, Secretary W. H. Jurgens of the Salem Bowling Association, which sponsors the tournament, said that he expects to have about 25 teams lined up for the five-man event when the deadline for entries is reached at mid-night Saturday.

Jurgens added that present indications point toward an entry of 40 teams in the doubles and 80 individual bowlers in the singles.

Due to unfavorable business conditions, this year's tournament is expected to be slightly smaller than the one of last year which attracted 50 five-man teams, 52 doubles teams and over 100 entrants in the singles.

Approximately 180 bowlers, in all, competed in last season's tournament, which was written into the record books as the largest single sports event ever held in Salem, exclusively for residents of Salem and vicinity.

Bowling observers are of the opinion that numerous Salem bowlers would like to enter the tournament this year, but that lack of spare money forces them to remain out of the competition. Bowling generally is one of the first sports to feel the pressure of hard times.

The prize list for the tournament, which will include awards in five-man, doubles, singles and all-events, will be drawn up at a meeting of the association at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Grate Recreation alleys. As in past tournaments, the prize list will be dependent on the number of entries in the various events.

Among the first entries in the five-man event were the Ohio Edison of the American League and the Salem News of the National League, the teams which finished one-two in the tournament last year.

Problems Face High School Athletic Board In Meeting

State Group To Discuss Abolishing Girls' Basketball and New Time-Set-Up for Games

By FRITZ HOWELL
COLUMBUS, Jan. 28 — Ohio's High School Athletic board meets tonight with plenty of items on the program—most of them centering around reactions to the new stream-lined basketball game, played for the first time minus the tip-off.

The state group will submit to the 1,140 member schools a referendum on whether girls' basketball should be abolished; discuss enlargement of the six district boards from three to five members each; map the spring sports schedule, and name the officials for the annual state cage tourney slated March 17, 18 and 19.

H. R. Townsend, state commissioner, said the board appears unanimous in belief that the new cage game is a "better one to watch" than the tip-off style—but that something should be done to safeguard the health of the players.

The commissioner said he had a host of innovations, submitted by coaches and spectators.

Floyd A. Rowe of Cleveland, president of the state board and member of the national rules committee, has introduced something new at the Cleveland sector by splitting the High school games into eighth, with a minute rest between periods except at the half when the full intermission is allowed. The usual High school game is played in quarters, while the colleges play halves.

New rule interpretations, in effect for the last half of the High school season, were announced today by Rowe. One new edict permits the team scored against to call time out before putting the ball in play, and allows either team to make substitutions after such time is called.

Others evolve around the player's privileges when receiving the ball.

Among the first entries in the five-man event were the Ohio Edison of the American League and the Salem News of the National League, the teams which finished one-two in the tournament last year.

MULLINS WHIPS MOOSE FOR 1ST WIN OF ROUND

Methodists, Whit's Garage Gain Second Wins In Class B

Registering their first victory of the second round of the Class A City Basketball league, Mullins cagers trounced the Moose, 37 to 24, at the Memorial building last night.

It was the first set-back of the round for the Moose, who finished in last place during the Class A first round. Mullins finished third in the opening round.

Cliff Greenisen led Mullins to the triumph, looping six field goals for 12 points. The Bodymakers held the edge throughout the contest after pulling into the lead in the first quarter.

The Methodists and Whit's Garage chalked up their second straight victories of the second round, Class B, in other games last night.

The Methodists defeated the Saxons, 30 to 28, as Lora ran wild to tally 19 points for the M. E. team. Seven field goals and five fouls made up Lora's point total.

Whit's Garage gained its second victory by spanking the Christians, 23 to 14. Milligan tallied eight points to lead the Garage five in scoring.

The Trades Class was handed its second straight loss in another Class B tilt, losing to Demings, 28 to 24. Courtney led the Pump-makers with 10 points.

Local hockey moguls expect to see the International-American Hockey league's attendance record smashed once again here Saturday from present box office indications. The local Arena holds the present tilt with 10,823 at the Cleveland-Providence clash.

Game Postponed

Due to the death of Judy Hill, seven-year old daughter of Coach Pierre Hill of Warren Harding High school, the basketball game between Salem and Warren, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed.

Replacing Warren in the game here tonight will be Brookfield's quintet, which is rated 26th among Ohio scholastic basketball teams.

REDS MANAGER SHOWS WHERE THAT $1.10 GOES

There Isn't Much Left For Management, Signs Warren Giles

CINCINNATI, Jan. 28.—Year in and year out several million baseball fans of the nation "lay cash on the line," but few of them ever give a thought to what becomes of the money they pay at the gate.

General Manager Warren Giles of the Cincinnati Reds "let his hair down" and revealed how each dollar received by a typical big league club during an average year was used.

The price of general admission grandstand seats at Crosley field is $1.10. This particular priced ticket constitutes the heavy percentage of all admissions sold.

When a fan buys a "dollar" ticket at the Cincinnati park he immediately contributes 10 cents in taxes to the Federal government and three cents to the state government, leaving the management 97 cents.

All National league clubs, when on the road, receive approximately 24 cents out of each paid admission, and league headquarters cut in for an additional two cents, so that out of the $1.10 collected the Cincinnati management has 73 cents left for itself.

That 73 cents figuratively becomes the club's baseball dollar for operating expenses, as revenue from concessions, billboard advertising, programs, radio rights, box seats, etc., brings receipts up to within a reasonable distance of $1 for each grandstand admission.

A breakdown of the Cincinnati team's average dollar, Giles said, shows the following:

For players' salaries, 30 cents; traveling expenses for team and officials, 7.8 cents; park repairs, maintenance and interest on club debts, 6 cents; administrative salaries and office expenses, 7.5 cents; regular taxes to Federal, state and county governments, 4 cents; insurance, special night game expenses, medical aid for players and legal advice, 4.5 cents; park employees' (gatemen, ushers, etc.) salaries, 5.5 cents; baseballs, bats and uniforms, 2.3 cents; miscellany, 4.4 cents.

SAXONS BATTLE CANTON CAGERS HERE SATURDAY

Salem Quint Hoping To Rebound Into Victory Column

Hoping to rebound into the victory column after suffering their first defeat in the Ohio and Western Pennsylvania Saxon league last week the Salem Saxon cagers entertain Canton in a league game at the Memorial building court Saturday night.

High-scoring John Lutsch, former Canton McKinley star, (no relation to the Salem basketball player of the same name) will lead the Canton quintet against Coach Pete Sanders' Salem aggregation.

Lutsch is the key man of the Canton club and one of the leading scorers of the Saxon league. In his last appearance here, he scored more than half of his team's points.

First place in the western division of the league depends on this game.

Giants Never Have Holdout Problem In Little Mel Ott

Dynamic Infielder Always Returns Signed Contract Without Any Argument With Office

By GAYLE TALBOT
NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Mel Ott, the "Little Hotfoot" of the Giants, has mailed in his signed contract, so it looks like there will be a baseball campaign despite the current holdout epidemic.

If the modest star from Gretna, La., ever does fail to send a signed contract back by return post, the magnates might begin to worry. For the day each January when Mel's signature hits the Giants' desk the word goes around: "All's well."

Though he's been a star almost from the day John McGraw yanked him out of Gretna High school, a kid of 16, Ott has never once even questioned the first contract offered him. The coming season will be his 13th as an active Giant.

How much more money Ott might have made out of the Giants by giving them an annual spring argument is difficult to reckon. But Ott is satisfied, and he's done all right. His salary for the coming season is generally believed to be around $17,000, making him possibly the highest paid infielder in the National league. He was, of course, an outfielder for all his big league career until Manager Bill Terry shifted him to third base in mid-season last year. He'll probably end his days now at the cozy corner.

Ott was the third Giant regular to sign, Pitcher Carl Hubbell and First Baseman Johnny McCarthy having accepted the club's original terms. Only Hank Lieber, outfielder, and Harry Danning, catcher, were listed as genuine holdouts.

The Yankees reduced their worries somewhat with the signing of George Selkirk, slugging right-fielder, who came down from his home at Rochester to reach an agreement.

Grand To Show Bowling Movie

Complying with the request of numerous bowlers, N. I. Walken, manager of the State and Grand theaters, has secured the bowling movie "Set 'em Up" for showing at the Grand theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

The bowling movie is a short feature which will be run in connection with the full-length feature "Charley Chan at Monte Carlo."

Such outstanding stars of the bowling game as Jimmy Smith, Mort Lindsay, Joe Falcato and Mrs. Floretta McCutcheon demonstrate perfect bowling form in addition to trick and fancy shots in the movie.

Two of these stars, Mrs. McCutcheon and Falcato, have staged exhibition bowling in Salem.

BOWLING RESULTS

The top ranking Salem News team of the Commercial league tasted defeat for a change at the Grate Recreation alleys last night, losing two out of three games to the third place Sinclairs in one of six league matches.

The defeats did not drop the News out of first place since the second place Grate Recreation five also lost two out of three games. The Junior Saxons had the honor of whipping the Recreation keepers.

Berg's Bretzels of Leetonia moved into a tie for fourth place with Smith's Creamery by taking two out of three games from Merit Shoes. Smith's lost two out of three to the Ohio Bell.

The People's Lumber Co. and the Salem Engineering each won three games in other matches, the Lumbermen defeating the Crescent Machine and the Engineers winning over the Salem Polo club.

John Jackson of the Salem News had the best score of the night, a 627 made on games of 245, 159 and 223.

At top, left, is Philip King, of the United States Maritime Commission, and right, C. C. Blane, of Washington, passengers who were reported to have written farewell letters as the plane in which they were riding out a storm flew blindly over the East Coast for six hours. But Pilot Capt. Fred Jones (lower right) and Co-pilot James Corrigan brought the ship down on East Hartford, Conn. Airport without a scratch. The run from New York to Washington, normally eighty minutes, took six agonizing, wind and rain-buffed hours.

The run from New York to Washington, normally eighty minutes, took six agonizing, wind and rain-buffed hours.

At top, left, is Philip King, of the United States Maritime Commission, and right, C. C. Blane, of Washington, passengers who were reported to have written farewell letters as the plane in which they were riding out a storm flew blindly over the East Coast for six hours. But Pilot Capt. Fred Jones (lower right) and Co-pilot James Corrigan brought the ship down on East Hartford, Conn. Airport without a scratch. OLD TAPESTRIES HELD BY COURT

17th Century Gobelin
Said To Have Been Stolen In 1932

(By Associated Press)
CLEVELAND, Jan. 28.—Six 17th century Gobelin tapestries worth a king's ransom were under the jurisdiction of a Cleveland court today—there to remain until a judge unravels a fantastic skein of circumstances to determine their rightful owner.

Woven from designs by the Dutch artist, Peter Paul Rubens, the works of art depict scenes from Homer's Odyssey.

Claims They Were Stolen
James W. Ryan, attorney for Morgan Brothers warehouse of New York, said the tapestries were stolen from his clients in 1932. He instituted a nationwide hunt, Ryan said, but until a few weeks ago their whereabouts were unknown.

Receives Offer
G. Harold Edgel, Boston museum curator, received an offer from a Cleveland lawyer, Ryan said, to sell "six tapestries for $200,000 which are worth much more."

This led to their discovery in a Cleveland storage warehouse. Ryan started a replevin suit, contesting which are Francis Zimmer and George F. Ebenger, former operators of a Cleveland club. Zimmer declined to name an attorney he said wanted to purchase the tapestries on condition that he receive a legal title. "I asked the department of justice myself to trace them," said Zimmer, who claimed a Warren, O., business man posted the tapestries as security for a $15,000 loan in 1932. The acquaintance told him, Zimmer said, that he bought the tapestries from a man who obtained them from Fox Film Corp. at New York, and insured them for $60,000.

Borrower Dead
The borrower died two years ago without repaying the loan, Zimmer said, adding that he tried unsuccessfully to locate an heir or an insurance company holding a policy on the rare hangings.

Ryan explained at New York that as a result of litigation following receipt of the tapestries for the Fox Film Corp., the tapestries became the Morgan Brothers' property.

Common Pleas Judge Frank J. Merrick is to hear the replevin action after Feb. 5, the deadline for an answer in the suit.

Just In Case

PITTSBURGH — Police Supt. Franklin T. McQuade is willing to go half-way to help would-be suicides who decide they've made a mistake. He proposes placing balsa wood floats, with long ropes attached, on bridges spanning Pittsburgh's three rivers. The idea is that pedestrians could toss the rafts overboard, and the struggling swimmer below could be hauled to safety. Of course, if the jumper doesn't change his mind, the plan won't work.
